

International Conference. Qualitative Methods and Young Researchers

1-2-3 September 2011

Location: Italy

Call for paper for international conference on qualitative methods and young researchers.

Today, the qualitative approach is increasingly used, and the debate on quality and quantity — which for decades has inspired the scientific community — seems to tone down.

The conference is open to young scholars whether they are graduate students, postdocs, research fellows, young researchers.

The papers presented will be evaluated by double blind review.

The papers will be published as conference proceedings.

We invite young scholars to submit their proposals on the following topics:

- Life story
- Qualitative interviews
- Ethnography (Auto and Virtual Ethnography)
- From the words to the textual datum: techniques of analysis
- Software for qualitative analysis
- Reflections on the use of qualitative research in various scientific areas

We will evaluate the proposals received for their relevance with the topic of the conference.

The language of the conference will be Italian and English. For scholars that come from other nationalities should be noted that the article must be delivered in one of these languages, also applies to the slides or materials used for the presentation of the work. The student will, however, choose to attend the oral presentation in its native language.

Please send abstracts (not more than 200 words) and a brief presentation of the author at this address gevisa.larocca@unikore.it by 25 January 2011.

Gevisa La Rocca

University of Kore, Enna

Email: gevisa.larocca@gmail.com

Visit the website at <http://unikore.academia.edu/GevisaLaRocca>